I am looking forward to seeing you in class today. As usually happens, this class is going to be quite a surprise for you. If you put in the necessary work, which is significant, you will learn a lot and perhaps find a career in the process.

We have spent the summer preparing for this class. The reasons for that will become clear once the class starts. I gave you a series of assignments over the summer to help prepare you for the class.

Unfortunately, only 6 of 14 people have completed the assignments that involved extra credit as of this morning. That is unfortunate since these assignments were intended to help you develop professionally.

Please review the emails I have sent this summer, which are collected here:

I am very serious about the issues discussed in these emails. If you are not prepared to do the required work in this course, you will not have a good outcome. As I always say. the only thing preventing you from becoming a good programmer is 10,000 hours of practice.
