For many years, we have been using this listserv to communicate in this class. One of the reasons I like to use email for these discussions is that everything is documented and archived.

The archive, which is linked from the course web page, is located here:

https://groups.google.com/g/temple_engineering_ece1111/

In this archive you will find an enormous amount of information about the homework assignments, labs, etc. It is definitely a resource to be Googled when needed.

Take a moment to familiarize yourself with the archive. To make this a little interesting, if you find a message written by Lilly Veloso that describes programming as fun and challenging, and forward that message to me, I'll give you 50 extra credit points on your first quiz.

Consider this an early bird special... I like to reward students for getting an early start on their courses. This one-time offer expires a week before our first class. Do not share your answers with your other classmates – that is not in anyone's best interest. The greater the number of people who take advantage of this offer, the less it helps your final grade. So keep your responses confidential.
